

Kicking off the year with a 'YAY'

AIA's new campaign empowers Malaysians to make positive lifestyle changes in 2021

TO SAY that 2020 was a tough year might be a bit of an understatement. The multiple lockdowns, economic uncertainty and distance from our loved ones created challenges that were far beyond our imagination.

And yet, it did not stop Malaysians from celebrating the positives in life and the little victories along the way. Be it picking up new hobbies and skills or finding new and creative ways to adapt to the new norm, Malaysians (in true boleh spirit) are doing their best to find the silver lining in every storm.

This forms the premise of AIA's new campaign which celebrates the eternal optimism of Malaysians from all walks of life while understanding the inherent desire of many for a better tomorrow.

Simply and aptly called "YAY", the campaign goes beyond the idea of just embracing positivity, by taking a deeper look into one's physical and financial health with the end goal of motivating Malaysians towards living Healthier, Longer, Better Lives.

As part of the insurer's commitment to empower a holistic lifestyle that is more than just eating right and exercising, the YAY campaign kicks off its year-long initiatives with a free financial health check for all Malaysians.

Understanding that financial security is an important step going into 2021, the uniquely tailored AIA Financial Health Check, which was previously only accessible by

On the motivation behind YAY, AIA Bhd chief marketing officer Heng Zee Wang said: "The Covid-19 pandemic and its long-term effects over the past year have undoubtedly impacted Malaysians in many ways.

"As we enter a new year, we want to start it on the right note together with our fellow Malaysians, standing by them and encouraging them to look ahead to better times – fuelled with hope and optimism.

"With YAY, we also aim to empower Malaysians to make small but powerful lifestyle changes through our unique health programme, AIA Vitality.

"We're set to enhance this programme with even more rewarding benefits this year which will ensure that our customers will be on track to live Healthier, Longer, Better Lives in 2021 and beyond," he added.
